

THEMATIC SEGMENT AGENDA

Beyond 2025: Countering health inequities through sustaining the HIV response, human rights and harm reduction for people who use drugs

Key objectives and focus of the meeting:

This thematic segment will explore how the Joint Programme and Member States can advance the implementation of the Global AIDS Strategy (2026–2031) by addressing the structural barriers that continue to undermine progress for people who inject/use drugs.

The discussion will focus on:

- The central role of human rights, legal and policy reform, and decriminalization in enabling access to HIV and harm reduction services.
- Ensuring sustainable harm reduction, including through domestic finance and integration into primary health care, while preserving community led models.
- The importance of community leadership, particularly networks of people who use drugs, in designing, delivering and monitoring effective services.
- Addressing the inequalities and lack of opportunities faced by women, young people, people in prisons, displaced populations and others who use drugs.
- Identifying actions needed for a sustainable, equitable, and rights affirming future HIV response.

Moderator: UNAIDS09:00 – 09:30 Opening dialogue and keynote addresses:

The opening dialogue and keynote segment will set the strategic and political context for the meeting, reaffirming the centrality of human rights, public health, and community leadership in advancing effective HIV responses for people who use drugs. The session will bring together global leadership, Member State perspectives, and representatives of communities most affected by HIV and drug policy, underscoring the importance of shared responsibility and multisectoral action.

09:30 – 10:00 Setting the scene; presentation of background paper highlights (data)

- Mary Mahy, UNAIDS

Remarks from the floor

10:00 – 10:15 Coffee Break

10:15 – 12:00 Panel 1: Addressing inequalities that prevent progress in the HIV response for people who use drugs

This session will open with an introductory intervention on how harm reduction services are adapting to the evolving needs of people who use drugs, including changing drug use patterns across age groups and the impacts of humanitarian, conflict-related, and other crisis settings. The session will then move into a panel discussion examining how persistent structural and social inequalities continue to undermine progress in HIV prevention, treatment, and care for people who use drugs. Drawing on lived experience, panelists will explore how intersecting forms of discrimination and exclusion—linked to age, gender, gender and sexual identity, incarceration, humanitarian crises, displacement, and stigma—shape access to harm reduction and broader health and social services. The discussion will highlight evidence-based, rights-based, and community-led approaches to addressing these barriers, with particular attention to reaching those most often left behind in the HIV response.

Panelists:

- Kaumba Akuffo, Human Rights Advocate and Co-Founder, Tithandizane Comfort Homes, Zambia
- Álvaro Morales Aser, Psicólogo saniativo-forense especializado en psicofarmacología y drogas de abuso, Hospital Clínico San Carlos / Imagina MÁS, Spain

- Tatyana Sleiman, Former Executive Director, Skoun, Lebanon
- Marta Machado, National Secretary for Drug Policies, Ministry of Justice and Public Security, Brazil

Remarks from the floor

12:00 – 13:00 Lunch break

13:00 – 14:45 Panel 2: Protecting human rights through law and policy change

This session will start from INPUD-led presentation of UNAIDS/UNODC/INPUD Drug Decriminalization Guidance followed by a panel discussion that will examine how human rights-based law and policy reform is essential to achieving the Global AIDS Strategy goals for people who use drugs. Panelists will explore evidence and country experiences demonstrating how decriminalization of drug use, alternatives to punishment, and protection of civic space contribute to improved HIV outcomes, reduced stigma and discrimination, and stronger community leadership. The discussion will also highlight the central role of people who use drugs in shaping legal reform and human rights advocacy, including the use of the Global AIDS Strategy and the Guidance Note as an advocacy and accountability tools

14:45 – 15:00 Coffee Break

15:00 – 16:30 Panel 3: Sustainable financing for harm reduction

The session will begin with an introductory presentation providing a global overview of funding gaps and transition challenges, followed by a moderated panel discussion and remarks from the floor. This will be followed by panel discussion that will focus on the long-term sustainability of harm reduction services, with particular attention to financing, integration within national health systems, and the preservation of community-led models. The discussion will address the chronic underfunding of harm reduction globally, the impacts of declining donor support, and the urgent need for countries to adopt domestic financing approaches that protect and scale up essential services. Drawing on global trends and country experiences, panelists will explore practical pathways to transition from donor dependency, integrate harm reduction within primary health care and universal health coverage (UHC) and remove legal and policy barriers that undermine domestically funded, community-led responses.
