Summary of the PCB NGO election process

7. The Communication and Consultation Facility (CCF), together with the Orientation, Accountability and Recruitment (OAR) Working Group of the NGO Delegation, manages the annual process of recruiting incoming Delegates to fill in the slots vacated by outgoing Delegates. OAR also manages the accountability processes within the Delegation when Delegates are unable to perform their duties and need to be replaced. Both processes of selection and replacement are as follows:

Determination of Vacancies

8. In 2024, three delegates were eligible to continue for a third year in the NGO Delegation. The delegation members assessed the eligible delegates for an extension of the term of service. All three delegates were granted a third-year extension in line with the maximum term of service conforming to ECOSOC resolution 1995/2. Following this process, the NGO Delegation confirmed a total of five vacancies to serve the term from 2025 to 2026.

Call for Applications

9. The CCF and the OAR working group reviewed and improved the online forms and requirements for applying for delegates. A call for applications was broadly circulated from 15 August 2024 to 15 September 2024. CCF opened an online submission form and provided access to NGO Delegation documents such as the PCB NGO Delegation Terms of Reference and the PCB NGO Delegation Vision, Mission, Principles, and Code of Conduct.
10. Due to limited applications received in the initial application period, the call for applications was extended in all regions until 6 October.
11. CCF disseminated the recruitment information through the NGO Delegation's global civil society email list-serve, website, regional civil society platforms and its social media pages such as Facebook, LinkedIn and X. Delegates were also asked to recruit among their networks in their respective regions. The call was reposted in various civil society electronic list-serves and social media pages of international and regional organizations, including those affiliated with the NGO Delegates. A total of 54 applications were received.

Assessment for Eligibility

12. All applications received were assessed for eligibility by the CCF. This entailed checking the application form and ensuring that all required documents such as support letters, organizational statement, and personal statement were submitted along with the application form. The assessment also entailed verifying information on the profile of the applicants, including their residence and place of work, in order for them to qualify in the region they were applying from. CCF also reviewed the supporting documents to check whether the information contained met the requirements, especially if the statements came from appropriate entities, e.g., national networks or regional networks.

Rating and shortlisting the applicants

13. The Delegation undertook shortlisting for all five regions. The top three shortlisted candidates were selected to be interviewed by the respective interview panels for the African, Asian and the Pacific, European, Latin American and the Caribbean and North American regions.

Composition of interview panels

14. During the application period, OAR and CCF constituted the interview panels. An Interview panel comprises a delegate from the region being recruited, a delegate from another region, and an external civil society representative from the region, who will participate in all online interviews with the short-listed applicants in the respective region.

Interviews shortlisted applicants

15. The interviews were scheduled from 18 October to 5 November 2024. The panels deliberated immediately after the last interviews and agreed on their recommended applicant. The external CS panelists were required to submit their recommendations in writing to the CCF as part of the documentation. The chair of each panel wrote a short summary of the deliberation of the interview panel to be shared with the full Delegation. On 5 and 12 November, the full delegation convened to select the incoming delegates based on the interview panel's recommendations and further deliberation.

Final consideration by the NGO Delegation

16. The Delegation carefully assessed the current needs and competencies required for 2025, prioritizing diverse representation across key populations and subregions. After thorough deliberation, consensus was reached on the selection of the incoming delegates. The overall balance and parity in representation in terms of sub-regional, HIV status, gender, age, and key population representation, as well as the skills, competencies, and expertise they will bring into the Delegation, were considered.

Standard term for serving as an PCB NGO Delegate

17. Delegates can serve up to three years as a representative of an NGO in the PCB NGO Delegation. The official appointment of an NGO as a member of the PCB NGO Delegation is for a term of two years.
18. An extension of this two-year term with a third year to serve as delegate is granted by the full Delegation in case the Delegation thinks the delegate representing the NGO is a very valuable part of the PCB NGO Delegation. This extension is solely based on personal merit and accomplishments by the delegate. The decision to grant a third extension is taken each year in August after a comprehensive assessment to determine how many recruitment processes need to be initiated.

New composition of the PCB NGO Delegation (2025 / 2026)
